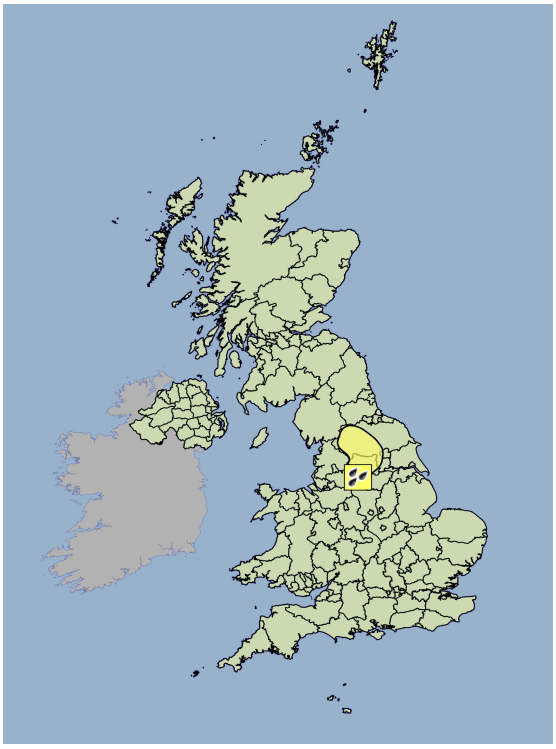
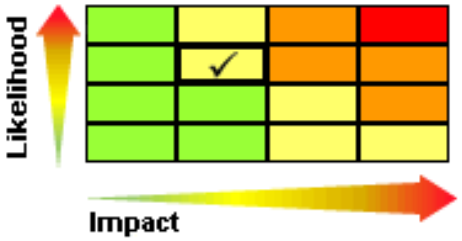
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The frontal zone affecting northern England on Wednesday will return northwards on Thursday bringing a further spell of rain, heavy at times. There is some uncertainty over the timing and extent of heavy rain, but given saturated conditions and high river levels some localised flooding is likely given rainfall totals of 20 to 40 mm.

This warning will be kept under review and updated if and when necessary.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 02:00 on Thu, 03rd Dec 2015 until 21:00 on Thu, 03rd Dec 2015

Rain is expected to be heavy at times through Thursday, falling onto saturated ground. Be aware that this may lead to localised flooding of land and properties as well as some travel disruption.
